HISTORY OF HARLESTONE GRANGE

Harlestone Grange stands on land once part of the historic Althorp Estate, famously associated with the Spencer family and Princess Diana. The surrounding village of Harlestone has deep roots, with evidence of prehistoric, Roman, and medieval settlement. The area was recorded in the Domesday Book of 1086, noting three manors, a mill, and a priest.

In the 13th century, Henry de Bray, a notable landowner, built his manor here and left detailed estate records now held in the British Museum. His influence shaped much of the village, including the remodelling of St Andrew's Church, which still stands today.

The Lumley family held another manor in Upper Harlestone, with remnants like the 15th-century dovecote still visible. Later, the Andrew family consolidated much of the land, building Harlestone House in 1715, a grand neo-classical mansion believed to have inspired Jane Austen's Mansfield Park.

Though the house was demolished in 1940, its stables and landscaped features remain.² In the 19th century, the estate passed to Earl Spencer, who developed workers' cottages and shaped the architectural character of the village. The land was eventually sold to private owners, and the site of Harlestone House became home to the Northampton Golf Club.

Today, Harlestone Grange is a modern development that honours this rich heritage, blending new homes with centuries of history.

As long as a housebuilder or developer has followed the correct registration process, including completing the necessary training, introducing a complaints procedure, and following other processes and procedures that are needed to meet the requirements of this New Homes Quality Code (the code), they will become a registered developer.

Registered developers agree to follow the code and the New Homes Ombudsman Service, including accepting the decisions of the New Homes Ombudsman in relation to dealings with customers. If a registered developer does not meet the required standards, or fails to accept and act in line with the decisions of the New Homes Ombudsman, they may have action taken against them, including being removed from the register of registered developers.

The code sets out the requirements that registered developers must meet. The code may be updated from time to time to reflect changes to industry best practice as well as the decisions of the New Homes Ombudsman Service. All homes built by registered developers must meet building-safety and other regulations. All registered developers should aim to make sure there are no snags or defects in their properties before the keys are handed over to a customer. If there are any snags or defects, these should be put right within the agreed timescales.

WHAT THE CODE COVERS

For the purposes of this code, 'customer' means a person who is buying or intends to buy a new home which they will live in or give to another person. (If a new home is being bought in joint names, 'the customer' includes all the joint customers.) However, the New Homes Quality Board have also started work to consider other groups of customers and what they should be able to expect from a new home. This includes shared owners and people who are buying a new home to let to other people. Any changes the New Homes Quality Board make to the code to reflect the needs of other groups of customers will be developed through consultation, and they will continually assess and review the effectiveness of the code, and any new laws or regulations that apply. Other areas which are not covered by the code are claims for loss of property value or blight (where a property falls in value or becomes difficult to sell because of major public work in the area), personal injury or claims that are not covered by the scheme rules of the New Homes Ombudsman Service.

Nothing in this code affects any other rights the customer has by law and does not replace any legislation that applies to the new home. Customers do not have to make a complaint to the New Homes Ombudsman Service if they are not satisfied with a matter that is covered by the code. They may decide to take other action, such as through the civil courts or other ombudsman or regulator.
